About us

Context and purpose of workshop

Are you...

- Fighting harms of companies in different sectors?
- Using tools like advocacy, media, and complaints?
- Collaborating (or seeking to) with CSO allies?
- Interested in exploring new ways to demand corporate accountability?

The OECD Guidelines could be an additional tool for your work, in this regional context

What are the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises on Responsible Business Conduct?

- Recommendations from OECD governments to companies on how to act responsibly
- Set of non-binding (voluntary) standards for responsible business conduct
- Governments that follow the Guidelines must establish a body called a National Contact Point (NCP) to promote the Guidelines and handle (non-judicial) complaints
- Updated in June 2023

What is in the updated Guidelines text?

Strengths & weaknesses

Strengths

- Government backing
- Broad coverage (sectors, issues, countries)
- Whole value chain
- Complaint mechanism
- Associated due diligence guidance

Weaknesses

- Not binding on companies
- States not required to enforce penalties
- Weak implementation (NCPs)

What are National Contact Points?

- Government-backed office that every government following the Guidelines must establish
- Two functions: (1) Promoting the Guidelines; (2) Handling complaints against companies alleged not to have met the Guidelines' standards
- Complaints are non-judicial, usually handled through mediation seeking to help the parties reach an agreement to address past harms and improve future practice
- Complaint eligibility – link to an OECD country

Filing complaints: strengths and weaknesses

Strengths

- Cheaper, faster, less adversarial (compared to litigation)
- Flexible remedy options
- Speak directly to company during mediation

Weaknesses

- Voluntary and non-binding
- High complaint rejection rate
- Few agreements
- Remedy not guaranteed

A complaint is stronger when it is filed strategically
